I am a small stockholder in General Motors. When I bought my shares (400) I did not know that G.M. looked upon me as a debtor.

I was under the impression that I was a shareholder. I bought G.M. as an investment. The company would not fail.

Now they think that what they did is OK. They used my money that I invested along with the money they borrowed from us as taxpayers to get back on top and now think that is OK to sell us small stockholders down the river.

I think the company should be held accountable for the stock they sold in good faith.

Sincerely
